

BOOK GROUP: June 2026: “The Good Samaritan” by John Marrs

The Good Samaritan fits into the genre of psychological thriller and although we have read other similar books and have enjoyed the twists and turns and the suspense of the plot, many in the group found this book disturbing. The subject of the book was suicide and many felt that this was not an appropriate subject for a work of fiction. For those who did persevere the plot had many twists and turns and was described a deadly game of cat and mouse.
